Historic Call to Action: Civil Society Organizations Urge the EU to Address Unidentified Anomalous Phenomena

The Netherlands – 25 November 2024 – In a historic and unprecedented move, fifteen civil society organizations dedicated to Unidentified Anomalous Phenomena (UAP) from across ten EU Member States, Norway, and the United Kingdom have joined forces to call upon the European Union to take urgent action on UAP. This marks the first time a collective appeal has been made to EU institutions on this pressing issue.

With decades of data on UAP incidents, with sightings by military personnel, pilots, scientists and civilians, these organizations highlight the serious implications UAP pose for public safety, national security, society and scientific inquiry and innovation. UAP include unexplained objects observed in the air, sea, and space, posing flight safety risks and potential national security concerns.

The organizations request the EU to implement a comprehensive process for the collection, analysis, and publication of UAP data across Europe, while advocating for UAP to be included in EU legislation regarding aviation, security, and space. They also urge EU institutions to fund research, across many disciplines, and establish information-sharing channels with other countries, in alignment with recent legislative efforts in the United States.

This call to action, sent to the European Parliament, follows a unique event held on 20 March 2024 at the European Parliament, where pilots, scientists, and UAP organizations presented findings to Members of the European Parliament, setting the stage for further EU engagement on this crucial topic.
